HO SCALE ELECTRIC TRAINS AND ACCESSORIES
TYCOPRO RACING SYSTEM
1971-72

Real railroads serve as a vital part of America today, and affect our everyday life. Railroads are responsible for nearly 40% of all transportation, principally in moving freight — both the raw materials, and finished goods of industry. And electric trains capture all of the action — in miniature.

Almost since the turn of the century, electric trains have been a favorite of boys and their dads. They still are. Besides being fun to operate, trains are educational, and help to develop mechanical and creative skills. This explains why the hobby of model railroading keeps growing. In fact, more electric trains were bought in 1970, than ever before!

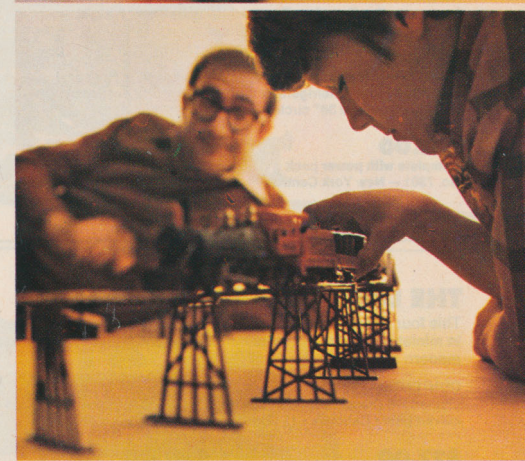

Today, the most popular electric trains by far, are HO scale, or 1/87 the size of real life. Tyco has pioneered and developed HO trains since 1932, and today is America's largest manufacturer of electric trains and accessories.

Operating Tyco electric trains is great fun for all ages, because there's plenty of action! You're the engineer — controlling the speed and direction, switching the cars onto a siding, uncoupling cars, or unloading freight — all by remote control! You can start with a small layout, in very little space... then add switches, more track, and accessories, later to expand your layout, for even more fun and realism.

You can keep on building a bigger and better railroad with Tyco, year after year. And, look at Tyco's true-to-blueprint detail. Look at the way Tyco equipment is built — and operates. Tyco makes your layout come alive!

As the leader in model railroading, Tyco offers a wide range of precision-engineered, quality-tested equipment — from complete sets, to separate locomotives, cars, operating and trackside accessories, and new Tyco-matic remote control switches.

Your Tyco electric train might just be the beginning of a lasting and satisfying hobby — model railroading. For years of fun for you, for dad, for the family, make your choice... Tyco.
